A Heart Willing to Give | Exodus 35:4 - 36:7

ICEBREAKER

What is something you have willingly given your time, money, or energy to because you genuinely believed in its purpose?

OR

Have you ever been part of something where people were so excited about the mission that everyone eagerly contributed? What made that experience compelling and memorable?

INTRODUCTION

Throughout Scripture, we see God's desire to dwell with His people. In Exodus, God invited the Israelites to build a tabernacle where His presence would be among them. But before they could build a place for God's presence, they had to confront what had captured their hearts.

What stood out to you most from this week's message?

INTO THE WORD

Read Exodus 25:8 and Exodus 35:4-5.

God invited the Israelites to participate in something He was doing rather than simply providing everything Himself. Why do you think God chooses to involve His people in accomplishing His purposes, and what might we miss when we view giving or serving as an obligation rather than an invitation?

Read Exodus 32:1-6 and Exodus 35:20-22.

The Israelites used their gold to make an idol, but later willingly brought their gold to build the tabernacle. What does this contrast reveal about the connection between our hearts, our worship, and what we value?

Read Exodus 34:6–9 and Exodus 35:20–29.

Despite Israel's earlier rebellion, God continued His relationship with them and invited them to participate in His work. Why is generosity motivated by gratitude for God's grace different from generosity motivated by guilt, pressure, or obligation? How might each motivation shape our relationship with God over time?

Read Exodus 35:21–29 and Exodus 36:3–7.

What words or phrases describe the people's attitude toward giving? What do you think would need to change in our understanding of God, our possessions, or our priorities for that kind of generosity to become a natural response rather than an extraordinary exception?

Read 2 Corinthians 9:6–8.

How do we reconcile cheerful generosity with the reality that giving our time, money, or abilities sometimes requires us to surrender things we genuinely want? What might it look like for us to make what God has already placed in our hands available for His purposes?

As we continue through Make Way, we're being invited to prayerfully consider what God wants to do in us and through us. Before we ask what God wants us to give or do, we need to ask whether we've fully surrendered our hearts to Him.

Where might God be inviting you to loosen your grip on something you've been holding tightly so that He can use it for His purposes?

Group Challenge: Set aside intentional time to pray, "God, what do You want to do in me and through me?" Ask Him to reveal what may be competing for your heart and how you can respond willingly to His leading.

Close by praying that God would give each person a heart that is fully surrendered to Him. Ask the Holy Spirit to reveal anything that has taken priority over God's presence and to cultivate willing, generous hearts that joyfully participate in His work.
